

Deli Gallery, New York presents
Brianna Rose Brooks
The way things go
November 21-December 19, 2020

There must be something the matter with them Because they would not be acting as they do unless there was Therefore they are acting as they are Because there is something the matter with them

They do not think there is anything the matter with them because one of the things that is the matter with with them is that they do not think that there is anything
the matter with them

Therefore
We have to help them realize that,
The fact that they do not think there is anything
The matter with them
Is one of the things that is
The matter with them

There is something the matter with them
Because they think
There must be something the matter with us
For trying to help them to see
That there is something the matter with them
To think that there is something the matter with us
For trying to help them see that
We are helping them
To see that
We are not persecuting them
By helping them
To see we are not persecuting them
By helping them
To see that
They are refusing to see
That there is something the matter with
Them
For not seeing there is something the matter

With them
For not being grateful to us
For at least trying to help them
To see that there is something the matter with

Them

For not seeing that there must be something the Matter with them

For not seeing that there must be something the Matter with them

For not seeing that there is something the matter
With them

For not seeing that there is something the matter
With them

For not being grateful

That we never tried to make them Feel grateful

Deli Gallery is pleased to present The way things go, a solo exhibition of new works by Brianna Rose Brooks at Nino Mier Gallery in Los Angeles. Brianna Rose Brooks (b. 1997) is a nonbinary Black artist originally from Providence, Rhode Island. They lived in Chicago for four years where they received a Bachelor's degree in Fine Arts at the School of the Art Institute of Chicago. They are currently pursuing an MFA in Painting from the Yale School of Art in New Haven.